RESEARCH PROFILE

I design interactive systems as environments in which people interpret cultural works and make meaning with artificial intelligence. My research connects human–computer interaction, media aesthetics, AI, art, and digital humanities, examining how datasets, models, and interfaces shape interpretation.

RESEARCH AND SYSTEM DEVELOPMENT

2024–2026 | Co-Reading — Research Lead and Developer

Led an end-to-end master's research project investigating human–AI co-reading of Korean modern poetry, spanning human-annotated dataset construction, emotion classification modeling, emotion-to-color mapping, and interactive system design. Developed Co-Reading as an interpretive framework in which computational representations support, rather than replace, human interpretation; presented successive stages of the research at national and international conferences.

2026 | KPoEM Interface — Sole Author and Developer

Designed and developed the interactive web system implementing the Co-Reading research framework. Integrated close reading, distant reading, and human–AI Co-Reading with emotion classification, color visualization, and interpretive interaction, translating the project's dataset, model, and emotion-to-color mapping into an interactive environment for poetry interpretation.

2025-Present | AI Cultural Heritage Docent Web Prototype — Full-Stack Developer

Collaborative research with Songyi Jeong and Baro Kim. Developed a prototype combining cultural heritage knowledge and generative AI to produce explanations responsive to visitors' backgrounds and languages; presented at DH2026.

2023 | BKKSG — Creator and Full-Stack Developer

Independently led product planning, design, and full-stack development of an artwork portfolio platform.
